

Namibia is a lower-middle-income economy with a per capita gross domestic product (GDP) that is significantly above average for countries in sub-Saharan Africa. Mining is central to the economy: Diamonds, uranium oxide, and base metals dominate mining. However, gold and natural gas are increasingly significant, and oil production is potentially so. Namibia supplies about 30 percent of the world diamond output. Uranium production is also important. Other important minerals include tin, lithium, lead, cadmium, zinc, copper, tungsten, and silver. Pakistan Exports to Namibia was US$238.38 thousand during 2020 and Imports from Namibia was US$1.27 Million during 2020.
