PRODUCT PROFILE

Rubber is one of the greatest natural commodities in the world and its versatility makes it ideal for many different applications. Rubber matting, auto tyres and tubes, vehicle parts, such as seals and timing belts, conveyor belts, footwear, cables and wires. By far the most common use for rubber is to make tyres - around 70% of natural rubber is used for this purpose. The global market size was valued at USD 40.77 billion in 2019 and projected to USD 52 billion in 2027. Asia accounts for approximately 93% of the world natural rubber production.

The Pakistan tyre market exhibited moderate growth during 2015-2020. Tyres are one of the essential components in automobiles as they aid in transferring the load of the vehicle from the axle to the ground. They are manufactured using materials such as fabric, wire, carbon black, natural and synthetic rubber, and other chemical compounds. As tyres are pneumatically inflated, they provide a flexible cushion for absorbing shock when the vehicle travels on a rough surface. Presently, the rising vehicle motorization rate in Pakistan is impelling the demand for tyres in the country.

The Pakistan tyre (tire) industry is currently experiencing moderate growth on account of the increasing vehicle ownership in the country. This can also be attributed to numerous infrastructural and macroeconomic reforms which is resulting in the development of industrial, construction and agricultural industries. Due to a consistent rise in the demand for tyres, local and foreign investors are showing interest in the industry, which is anticipated to strengthen the market growth in the upcoming years.
